BOGOTA, March 5 (Reuters) - A bomb has damaged a section of Colombia's Cano Limon pipeline in eastern Arauca province, state-run oil company Ecopetrol said, the tenth attack on the pipeline this year.

Oil spilled by the Monday bombing, which took place in the Saravena municipality near the border with Venezuela, was contained in the crater left by the explosion, the company said in a post on Twitter.

The pipeline was not pumping at the time of the attack.

Although Ecopetrol did not name the group responsible, a military source said the leftist National Liberation Army (ELN) rebels, considered a terrorist organization by the United States and the European Union, were responsible.

The 2,000-strong ELN regularly attacks oil infrastructure.
