One hundred days to break the independence of the Bank of the Republic, drive out the oil companies, blow up Ecopetrol, stop investments in the productive sector, induce the financial crisis of the EPS, release, pardon and hire the leaders of the front line and massify the land seizure.

... and to control prices, and to break the independence of the Banco de la República, and to drive out the oil companies, blow up Ecopetrol, curb investment in the productive sector, induce the financial crisis of the EPS, release, pardon and hire the chiefs and sergeants of the front line and massify the land seizure.

Oh, and of course, a hundred days to identify the true enemy within.

Will I be a teacher?

No man! The internal enemy is the rule of law, that bourgeois and oppressive nonsense called law and institutions; that does not let our Tyrannosaurus Rex, the Petro Rex, save everyone from injustice and inequality.

And of course, one hundred days to identify the external enemy; although that one was easy, there are no surprises. The United States and the Federal Reserve are responsible for everything: the recession, the war in Ukraine, migration, drug trafficking, violence, etc... The Yankee imperialism of a lifetime.

And a hundred days of chatter. We already see the daily speeches, ever longer, ever further removed from reality, manipulative, in the most typical and stale tradition of tropical communist tyrannies. Petro has already unleashed his infinite talkative talents. Like a snake charmer, he seduces the people with speeches anticipating his predictable lack of results and management.

Meanwhile, Ocampo, possessed as the Kerenski of the regime, wears himself out assuming the role of firefighter of the muddiness of all the ministers and of Petro Rex. On a daily basis, in front of the press, he fights to convince us that Petro and his faithful are not what they are and will not do what they say they will do.

Others, who accommodate themselves in the establishment, the companies and in the lackluster opposition, also pose as healers, tranquilizers by trade, disaster manipulators; They are calling for waiting measures while they float and protect their interests and eagerly seek the routes of intrigue in the new corridors of power. One hundred days are few to read and meet the new "apparatchiks". The usual lobbyists work incessantly, the luxury restaurants are not enough to serve commissions to the new owners of power.

The truth is what is denied, and everything has to go much faster. The speed with which the Petro is moving towards disaster is dictated by three factors:

First, the inevitable global recession, which, through no fault of the Petro, is coming upon us, taking momentum away from the short recovery; it will increase unemployment and hurt the economy in general.

Second, the incompetence and lack of capacity of the government teams. Unaware of the complexities of the public function and the bureaucratic rigor that overwhelms the huge and dysfunctional Colombian state, they have neither the knowledge, nor the experience, nor the people to control the State, much less to make it produce results in any way. Petrism landed in the morass that consumed all its predecessors in a state parceled out to special interests, many of them linked to their own support sectors, such as the civil service and teachers' unions, of course.

Third, the disbelief of the markets and investors. The markets already know what Peronism, Chavismo and AMLO's politics, which inspire Petro, did with Argentina, Venezuela and Mexico, and they are not willing to believe again. Petro knows this and, therefore, the only way out, like Napoleon at the end of his hundred days, is the "fuite en avant", the flight forward, towards the dictatorship.
