The National Government, delivered tourism figures, as a fundamental sector to advance in the energy transition towards a sustainable and productive development model.

During this Easter season, the dynamics of tourism in the country increased, despite the fact that connectivity with some tourist destinations was affected by the suspension of flights by VivaAir and UltraAir airlines; There were blockades on some highways in the country, and there was an orange alert in the area of influence of the Nevado del Ruiz volcano.

Preliminary figures indicate that more Colombians traveled the country's highways, in inter-municipal transport, with an approximate growth of 2.28% compared to Holy Week of the previous year.

Religious, nature and non-traditional destinations stand out that had very satisfactory results, such as Cauca, Guainía, Boyacá and Meta.

Destinations such as San Andrés, Santa Marta and Cartagena experienced a decrease in the number of visitors due to difficulties in air connectivity. San Andrés in particular experienced a more complex situation due to its dependence on air transport, while Santa Marta managed to
