Over the past three weeks, Colombian companies have been coming forward not only to talk about the remainder of the past year, but also to present the dates of their shareholder meetings. But also to put forth proposals for distribution of dividends for the consideration of its partners.

For this reason, LR reviewed which stocks would be the most profitable to invest in with a minimum salary and Mineros, Ecopetrol and Grupo Energía Bogotá lead the list. For the exercise, the price of securities ending in February on the Colombian Stock Exchange was taken as reference. As per the latest stock market index, these have high to moderate liquidity. Commission costs or taxes paid by users were not analyzed.

Keep in mind that dividends are the money that every company decides to distribute among its shareholders each year. The profit they received in the last year or the amount of money they have allocated for it. Currently, only those proposals are known that need to be approved by the legislatures.

Catherine Rojas, equity analyst at Casa de Bolsa, assures that every investor should keep in mind that profitability is not the only factor they should focus on. "It is important to verify the amount to be distributed has been approved by the shareholders' meeting Dividend distribution projects always give us a rough estimate of what the approved distribution will be like," he said.

With this clarity, you can make your minimum wage investments more profitable. ($1.3 million) is in the miners. With this price, you can buy 565 shares which will give you a return of $200,934.

Ecopetrol, for its part, is similarly valued as a mining company, as the per share price closed at $2,290 in February, So at a minimum you can buy 568 which will give you a return of $177,117.

Rojas added this when making investment decisions "It is always relevant to consider what the historical payment trajectory has been, looking at many companies in Colombia" They have always maintained a very stable dividend payout policy, which remains consistent over time and is in line with the indicators and developments of both the company and the economy."

Jhannisi Caceres, Profit Analyst at Actions & Securities, He said it should be reviewed whether the corporate profile of these dividends is positive, that is, whether the results have been good enough that it allows the company to pay additional or higher dividends., without affecting its normal cash flow or its operations. "These kinds of ideas are the most important thing," he concluded.

Key Factors While Investing

According to experts, it is important to have the context of the company you are going to invest in, but you should also analyze its recent past. How its profits and other financial indicators have behaved.

Besides, "Always be very careful of the company's projected profits for the year in which the investor expects to receive dividend payments. Since certainly the profit result is directly attributable to the dividend policy established by the company," as noted by Catherine Rojas, equity analyst at Casa de Bolsa.
